

ABSTRACT

A method of job placement. The method includes storing a database including a plurality of records of worker profiles, providing a description of a job opening, storing the description of the job opening in a job opening database, and automatically determining by a processor, for at least one of the records in the worker database, whether the worker profile in the record matches the description of the job opening.